what Baby should eat. The following is only one of the many letters the manufacturers of that delicious. new scientifically cooked Breakfast Food, Cook's Flaked Rice, are receiving daily:

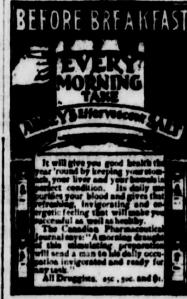

Dear Mr. Cook: I wish to let you know what your Cook's Flaked Rice has done for our baby. She was sick and could not assimilate or retain any of the several different foods we tried, un-til we tried your Cook's Flaked Rice, and to our delight she is now a fat, healthy, good-natured heby, and wants no other food but your Cook's Plaked Rice.

The way I prepared it for my half to two cups of Cook's Flaked Rice into two quarts of slightly salted loiling water and stir gently for four or five minutes—not longer—them add a little boiling milk and then add a little boiling milk and a pinch of sugar.

You may publish this letter if you wish, as I think you would be deing mathers with sick babics a great hindness by advertising your Cook's Plaked Rice more as a food for baby.
